Nome, Alaska. April 26, 1915

My dear doctor Nichols :

This will be the last letter to you of the season, I believe. The trails seem to be breaking up now, and I for one am glad of it as I don't want to have to consider making a trip again, even. Since I have been back I have had several quite serious complications of different natures. Enough to make me almost forget all of my troubles up in your country. But I have been able to pull through so far.

There is no news to give you of any special importance. I hope to be able to get up to Kotzebue quite early in the season but of course I cannot figure one way or another.

My pictures seem to be coming out quite well. I have developed most of them and they show up fairly well. You will get some prints later on.

Very truly yours,
