SUBJECT

Building room.

Dear Mr. Evans:

When I wrote you before about building a room up stairs I had no time to go into details. I believe if the upstairs were papered and ceiled that the cost of same would be returned in the saving of heat this winter. It would not take near as much fuel to keep the temperature up in the building if this were done and that is about all that is necessary except to build a window in the back end for fire escape. Everything is on hand and if such were done, perhaps, it would not be necessary to build the other building for some time.

Very truly yours,
Chas. B. Jones,

Teacher U.S. B. of Ed.
